Terra Nova

Hi, everyone, MarcellusMiro66 here! This is the first installment in a Teen Titans anthology series; a throwback to films like Park Chan-wook's Oldboy (2003) and Martin Scorsese's Taxi Driver (1976), the story "taking place after the Titans Alliance (the first installment in the main series) " revolves around Terra, the former Teen Titan who can control Earth.

After her final encounter with Beast Boy, Terra begins to slowly recover fragments of her old memory; during this, Nightshade " leader of the Titans Alliance " decides to keep her under close surveillance.

**Warning**: Major Spoilers Ahead!

She never liked going outside, especially when it was regarded after hours, but this was one of her notable exceptions. Slipping on her blue jacket, she slipped out of her her apartment and up to the rooftop of the building; she slumped down to the ground and curled up into a ball, beginning to gaze up at the stars above. The last time she saw stars like those was... A long time ago, she thought. She still couldn't remember what she had to do, rather than just be another pretty face in a crowd full of endless pretty faces. Speaking on pretty faces, she began to reminisce about (and instantly grimace at) the last encounter with that Teen Titan:

_"Things change, Beast Boy. The girl you want me to be is just a memory..."_

What if things hadn't changed? Would this "Terra" just be a memory like she is now?

Burying her hands into her face, "Terra" began to cry and remain on the roof until morning... Completely unaware of the presence of a marine telepath watching her from afar. Said telepath clutched the tracking device in his grasp (specifically his right hand), debating whether or not to attach the tracking device to the girl he was supposed to watch over.

That's exactly what Aqualad did, however.

Nightshade was typing up on his newly acquired supercomputer â€" courtesy of Bruce Wayne / Batman himself â€" the profiles of his teammates plus a few more; he saw more than a few party crashers during the confrontation with the Brotherhood of Evil. One, a villain(?) named Red-X: First donned by the Boy Wonder, Robin since retired from the alias, which was currently held by the mystery man â€" or woman â€" underneath. However, due to him and the Teen Titans leader teaming up with each other on one occasion... The term "villain" may be debatable. Two, another villain(?) named Jinx: She was one of the former students of the H.I.V.E. (Hierarchy of International Vengeance and Extermination) Academy before the school collapsed... Literally. She was now one of the former members of the H.I.V.E. Five. Three, a hero(!) named Wonder Girl: This was a girl whom he could tolerate... Besides Black Arrow. The sister and apprentice of one Wonder Woman of the Justice League, she was only on Earth for a few moments or more and she was already seeking trouble, albeit unintentionally. Four, another hero(?) whose identity remains anonymous at this moment. As far as he was concerned...

The power to control Earth was quite heroic. Or villainous. Or possibly even both.

It was following this information proceeding through his head that Nightshade began to reach an epiphany: He had witnessed this amazing ability before. But where? He began to search and skim through the list of the Teen Titans; he found this extremely difficult considering the number of which had skyrocketed since the Brotherhood Brawl. It was then on Page 52 that he finally found who was he looking for: Tara Markov, the illegitimate daughter of King Viktor of Markovia and the brother of Brion Markov aka "Geo-Force". This also made her the illegitimate Princess of Markovia. She and her brother were tormented and tortuously experimented on by the royal court for months and maybe years; It was because of this that Tara couldn't stay in her homeland and ran away from her family.

So the term "villain" was out of debate â€" a fallen hero was more suitable.

Nightshade pulled open his desk drawer door and out his T-Communicator; he soothed his nose and practically prayed that the one Titan he was making the call to was not sleeping yet.

Speaking of whom, Aqualad and the rest of the team were sprawled out all over the living room, bored senseless and senselessly aiming for something to do to kill their boredom. Then again, considering that the team was in the East, what was there to do? However...

"Aqualad! Come in, Aqualad!"

Everybody, the marine telepath in particular, leaped up from their spots and began sprinting towards him. Aqualad wouldn't have any of it, so he raised one hand which prompted his teammates to screech to a stop. He placed the T-Communicator to face his caller,

"Nightshade?"

"I'm gonna guess: You thought I was Robin?"

"Seriously, are you sure you and he aren't brothers?"

"I seriously doubt that possibility, Aqualad. Listen, I need to speak with you... Alone."

Aqualad furrowed his eyebrows and frowned, but eventually nodded and shot the rest of the team a glorious glare that signaled them not to follow. He filed into his room and locked everything that needed to be locked. Turning his attention back to the T-Communicator, he nervously blew hair out of his face,

"You were saying?"

"I was saying... There's something I need you to do... Alone."
